Yorkview Road Incident Update

At this point it appears that the male subject died from a self-inflected gunshot wound. Family members are still being notified. There was an odor of natural gas and gasoline in the residence; however, there is no reason to believe that natural gas or gasoline contributed to his death.

Original Release

On Tuesday 1/15/08 at approximately 2:48 p.m. Sheriff's Deputies were dispatched along with York County Fire and Life Safety personnel to a residence in the 100 block of Yorkview Road. A neighbor called to report an adult male lying on the back stairs of the residence. As units arrived they discovered the male at the described location who appeared to be deceased. This was confirmed by medics. Immediately, deputies on scene detected a strong odor of gas coming from the residence. Deputies and Fire Department personnel set-up a perimeter, evacuated the immediate areas and allowed hazardous materials units to clear the residence. Once this was completed residents were advised that they could return to their homes and Sheriff's Office Investigators are continuing the process of investigating the unattended death.
