Winter Storm Expected This Weekend – Stay Alert!

A significant winter storm is expected to impact the region this weekend, with moderate to high probabilities for hazardous conditions. While exact details remain uncertain, recent trends point to more mixed precipitation and lower snowfall totals, especially across SE Virginia and NE North Carolina. This means sleet and freezing rain could lead to dangerous travel and power outages. Bitterly cold air will follow the storm, keeping high temperatures below freezing through the first half of next week and prolonging snow and ice impacts. York County offices and facilities may close or adjust schedules due to the storm. For the latest updates, visit YorkCounty.gov or follow us on social media.

Are you prepared?

Stock Up on Essentials: Keep at least 3 days' worth of non-perishable food, bottled water, and necessary medications. Don't forget pet supplies.

Prepare Your Home: Insulate exposed pipes, check your heating system, and seal drafts to keep warm.

Create an Emergency Kit: Include flashlights, batteries, blankets, warm clothing, and a battery-powered radio.

Ready Your Vehicle: Fill your gas tank, check antifreeze, and keep an emergency kit in your car (blanket, snacks, water, jumper cables).

Stay Informed: Monitor local forecasts and sign up for emergency alerts:
